In Ryan Gabrielson, Ryann Grochowski Jones and Eric Sagara's essay, "Deadly Force, In Black and White," from ProPublica <https://www.propublica.org/article/deadly-force-in-black-and-white>, the authors this is important because this is proof that cops are killing black males and females.

When we consider the issue of Black Lives Matter, some might wonder, why are cops killing so much black males? Gabrielson, Grochowski and Sagara's article addresses this question because more than 686 black males and females got killed by police in this year and the year have not finished. People were in shock when Michael Brown was killed in 2013 that when people were realizing that they were killing too much black males. From the year 2013 through 2016 more 3777 died by police officers.

"The 1,217 deadly police shootings from 2010 to 2012 captured in the federal data show that blacks, age 15 to 19. A rate of 31.17 per million, while just 1.47 per million white males in that age range died at the hands of police."

This is basically saying more than 1,217 black males died by white police from 2010 to 2012 from ages 15 to 21. And this matters to me because they are killing too much of us for no reason.

This makes me wonder that maybe a cop would kill me or somebody I know just because I'm color or a white person would kill me or one of my friends like Michael Dunn killed Jordan Davis a 17-year-old man shot in a gas station in Jacksonville, Florida.

What we can appreciate about this writer's work is how they talking about racism in the whole world with white people killing black people. They writing this because young black males in the recent years were far risk of being shot dead by police for no reason. This matter to me because this is really happening with the black and white people.
