So far the story of

Jeanne's The three wishes-Marie Le Prince de Beaumont reminds me of an experience I had. One day my family and I went for a walk to the water park, but just that day my friend had a party and it was I heard that I wanted to go to both places. When my dad asked me if I wanted to go to where I wanted to go to both places I wanted to go and he said that I did not have to choose one that I thought very well. I went to my friend's party, but it turned out that on that day I had an exam and I missed going to the park with my family and my friend's party. In this story a couple that was happy, they wanted everything and they were given the opportunity of opting it but they did not think well and they lost it again and they stayed like at the beginning. He talked about a woman and a man who were happy, but they wanted to be happier having more money, a long life, good health among other things. One day a fairy appeared to them who would counsel them three desires, but she told them to think it through because they would only be those three desires. That same day they were at the campfire thinking about their wishes and the woman without thinking said "as I would like there to be a sausage at the campfire" and suddenly one appeared. The very angry husband told him "that you have done you have wasted one of our wishes as I would like that sausage was stuck to your nose" and so it was. The very angry wife says "what have you done you have taken revenge on me and now we only have one wish and we will use it to fix this problem and we will stay as at the beginning with nothing" and so it was. This reminded me that we can not obtain everything at the same time, if not little by little.
