

Does Trump Form a More Perfect Union?

An important purpose of our government, as stated in the Preamble of the U.S. constitution is to form a more perfect union. The president of the U.S. plays an important role in ensuring our government's actions are working toward this goal. Among the most significant presidential powers that can form a more perfect union are Executing the law, Ordinance Power and Appointment Power. President Trump's decision helps us understand the importance of power because he's the only one who can form a perfect union.

Executing the Law contributes to Forming A More Perfect Union because Our President Donald Trump has the immigration laws very strict now. The reason for this was because when the president declared that immigration would follow up with the problems that go in the country. For example, a fact says, "immigration law prosecuting adults and secondary children to department of Health and human services". This goes to show that executing the law means that the immigration rules comply with how they treat them or how to treat them.

Ordinance Power is just to confirm the rules or say in any way. For example, the congress could write a law and the president is the only one who could pass the law because he is the one that has that OP Power. This regulates to any laws because whatever the president says that's what mostly all the people have to listen to and still follow orders. So basically, you don't want to be on bad terms so your going to have to agree with some stuff he might say but can't do nothing about it.

Appointment Power connects to making a more perfect union by balancing the power between the president and the constitution. This all connects to making a better union because in so many ways they could both agree or disagree on some issues they don't like. For example, if the president puts down law and the constitution doesn't agree with it because of its terms they could all overthrow the president and deny the law from passing. This has to be the best way that you could make the nation better because the Appointment Power.

Posted by Jesus on March 5, 2019

<https://www.youthvoices.live/2019/03/05/does-trump-form-a-more-perfect-union-2/>

In Conclusion, An important purpose of our government, as stated in the Preamble of the U.S. constitution is to form a more perfect union. The president of the U.S. plays an important role in ensuring our government's actions are working toward this goal. Among the most significant presidential powers that can form a more perfect union are Executing the law, Ordinance Power and Appointment Power. President Trump's decision helps us understand the importance of power because he's the only one who can form a perfect union.