

Argument is everywhere – billboards

What i observed in this image was a message basically telling drivers to text and drive. The message says that because if you text and drive then you'll end up being in a car accident and die, the message is also from a funeral home, if more people die then they will end up buying a casket for the person in a funeral home. I think they are motivating people to die while they drive. My position about this would be to disagree because i don't want people to die. The image of the billboard is my evidence. I am honestly surprised on how fast my opinions form and how fast i just automatically make claims about something.
